GUARDS THE FAMILY.

A Law to Punish Breakers-Up of Homes.

Protection for Wronged Wives and Deceived Husbands.

Senator Cantor's Bill Almed at Flagrant Moral Transgressors.

Senator Cantor's bill, making it a misteembly. This bill is known as No. 715, and is immediate outside of the railroad company's an amendment to the Penal Code. If it be comes a law it will become section 356 of the

The section reads as follows: "SECTION 356-A person who, directly or indirectly, knowingly aids or encourages a married person to live separately and apart from his or her wife or husband without the consent of such wife or bushand, except for such cause or causes and under such circumstances as entitle the party so aided or encouraged to a judgment of divorce or separation or annulling a void or voidable marriage, is guilty of a misdemeanor."

This amendment is intended to bring within the pale of justice a class of violators of the moral law that has thus far been exempted from legal punishment-men who ignore the rights of husbands and debauch light-headed wives, and women who lure away husbands and fathers from their lawful spouses to live shameless lives with their paramours, in violation of their marriage vows and in neglect of their duty to society in the care and maintenance of their families.

This law warns these people that they must respect the marriage rights of others if they ave no respect for their own or themselver There are similar laws under different titles in many of the United States, and they have been found to produce a most salutary effect. Heretofore in this State there have been but three classes of actiop at law in such cases. The injured wife of husband thas had the poor right of suit for divorce from the partner whom she or he once took for better of worse. The wife has had the right to sue the siren who has lured away her husband to recover damages for altenating his affection, or she might resort to the courts to compelher recreast husband to give bonds that he would contribute to her support and that of her ehlidren, with the punitive alternative of going to jail. The wronged husband has had his only legal remedy in actions for divorce, or to recover money damages from the altenator of his wife's love.

No provision of these remedial laws has touched the root of the evil or has developed any power to lessen it. The statutes have hardly acted as a check upon marital infidelity, and the daily newspapers teem with reports of the discovery of infidelity among all sorts of people, from the millionaire and his diamond-bedecked mistress to the poor laborer, who has deserted his humble and helpless wife for some courtesan of the dives. When discovery has come, the ruin-working woman or heartless debuchee has only laughed at the trouble she has created for others. There are similar laws under different titles in many of the United States, and they have

Such a case was that of Theodore Larbig and Dovie Comstock. Had such a law as is provided in the Cantor bill been enforced against Mrs. Comstock Theodore Larbig would probably have been alive and happy with his wife and family to-day.

David Ramsey would probably never have had the provocation which led him to shoot at his wife in her uptown flat had there been such a law as this on the statute books, and the chances are that Wetster, the actor, would not now be a convicted taker of human life.

would not now be a convicted taker of human life.

The proposed Cantor law goes further. It takes cognizance of this peculiar crime against the laws of God at its inception and makes it a misdemeanor even to aid or encourage a husband to leave his wife or a wife to leave the home of her husband, and that provision of the law will tend to put every fitzen on his guard and make him careful of the marital rights of others.

He who harbors a faithless or fickle wife or gives aid or comfort to a husband who seeks to deser his wife and home will be guilty under the law. though the courts, always holding that every law is founded in equity and common sense, will not permit it to operate to the distress of suffering wives or husbands, nor to the harm of those who seek not to do evil, but to succor the distressed. For the law leaves the Court full discretion, and it may in its wisdom make the punishment only nominal, suspend punishment or dismiss the case altogether should it appear that no evil was done or intended.

In short, the law is intended to protect husbands and wives from the wiles and acts of the life in the property of the law leaves the Court sull discretion.
